

Franco Peracchi

Professor of Econometrics at Tor Vergata University and Fellow of the Einaudi Institute for Economics and Finance (EIEF), both in Rome, Italy. After receiving a MSc in Econometrics from the LSE and a PhD in Economics from Princeton University, he taught at UCLA and NYU before returning to Italy. His research interests include econometrics, labor and health economics, and the economics of social security and pensions. He is currently working on the patterns of change in human height in Italy, cognitive decline among the elderly in Europe, and issues of nonresponse and missing data in household surveys.